

Women Explained (kinda)

Real questions from real men.
Real answers
from real women.
Real scary.

Why do you insist on not ordering dessert/fries/etc., but always end up eating 3/4 of mine?

Because ordering them makes us feel like pigs. However, when they are sitting in front of us, the desire to eat them outweighs the desire to not feel like a pig.

Why don't you grow a pair and not let other people take your dessert? Oh right, sex.

It only has calories if it sits on our plates.

Because we know you hate that.

Why don't you say what you mean? If I say, "Go have fun," or, "No, I'm not mad," it's because I want you to go have fun, or I'm not mad. This is not necessarily the case with women.

If you want the real answer, ask three times. The first two answers are a test to see whether or not you really know us.

Sometimes I don't want to feel the way I do, so I say what I would say if I felt the way I wanted to. Maybe they think you should be smart enough to know that you shouldn't go have fun or know that they're mad, so they're pissed off anyway.

Because we like to mess with your heads.

Do women really decide within the first two minutes of meeting a guy whether or not she would have sex with him? If so, can that decision be reversed?

Mostly true. It can be reversed, but it takes a long time. So, no, a few more drinks and a slick line won't get her home at the end of the night.

Usually. It can only be reversed on the third Friday after a full moon by using a good joke or Jäger.

What's the big deal with the toilet seat? Aren't you at least somewhat thankful that we're lifting it? Then when you put it down, it's at least clean.

I don't want to touch it after you've peed all over it. It's your pee. You touch it.

It's funny that you mention that. Just this morning I had the unpleasant experience of taking an unwanted dip into the cool, clean (?) water in the toilet bowl. I did not enjoy it. It's like if you went to sit down in your favorite La-Z-Boy recliner to watch the game and perhaps take a nap, and you suddenly realized that it wasn't your recliner at all, but it was, in fact, a BOWL OF TOILET WATER.

Why do women say Valentine's Day isn't important to them, but penalize boyfriends/husbands who fail to recognize the occasion?

It's not important. It's a trite Hallmark holiday. But that doesn't excuse you from being trite. All of our Moms got us heart cards and candy every year when we were growing up, and all we could think about was the day we would get a heart card from a boy. Just indulge us, please.

Penalize? Like send you back 10 yards? Who the heck wrote that?! But anyway, I don't know. It's silly to say one thing and do another, but that's not something that's specific to women.

We really do enjoy messing with your heads.

For more questionable explanations of women, or to print your own copy, visit <http://thestateoftheunion.com/>